The Most Beautiful Girls in the World

We say the world is lovely and that loveliness is enough. And beauty being the best of all we know, from the Aurora to Zanzibar, we're sure these lovelies will appeal to the most discriminating of roving eyes. So wander through the following pages . . . and your eyes will tell you where to rest.

The GLACIER GIRL'S STRANGE JUSTICE

The naked injustice of his crime was exposed when the woman revealed the bare facts.

By MERRON WILKINS

On December 29, 1938, a naked white man was led out of the wilderness in the Mackenzie Delta settlement called Inuktit. The white man was manacled and he was led past the silent community of about 150 people, about 75% of whom were native Eskimos, to the outskirts of the settlement where his shackles were taken off.

At the edge of Inuktit the white man was welcomed to a sled and a team of huskies. He moved to the sled and took the traces in his hands. He slipped a snowshoe on to the sled itself, working it in between two pieces of wood. This was the diary he had been keeping, even though the days of his imprisonment.

The white prisoner and his preparations for his journey had been watched in complete silence by the handful of white men who had come to see him off, and by the Eskimo men and women, who were gathered around the dog team and sled.

Ahead of the white prisoner was a journey of 120 miles to the next town, over ice and snow. He had no provisions, no food, no weapons. The temperature was 43° below zero. The journey itself was a punishment added on to the white man for the rape of an Eskimo woman.

There was only one consolation to the punishment. And it was not a minor one. The white prisoner had to make the journey absolutely completely, stark naked. (Continued on next page)

THEY'RE SELLING

The mod clothing shop in Greenwich Village was crowded with lovely teenage girls trying on the latest wicker macramé fashions from England. And the black-haired manager in a discolored silver blouse and shimmering silver macramé was worried about the well-dressed man who was staring intently at a salesgirl modeling a golden see-through dress.

"No, I don't think my sons would like that one either," the man said, as he pulled on his pipe. Then he seemed to realize how many dresses the girl had modeled. "I'll just take that gold lace macramé shirt with the matching gold bikini pants," he added quickly, and peered out an expensive billfold.

"Thank God," the black-haired girl said. "I was afraid he might be a problem. Many men do come here to shop for their young wives or wives or daughters, of course. But many more men come to get their sexual look, baby. They've seen all the lovely, young girls on television or on the street, and then they discover shops like this... and it's like paradise to them. You can spot them after a while... and the guy was gonna get trouble. He's the kind that wants the gal to meet him in a hotel room later... and model the clothes again."

This New York shop is only one of hundreds of wild mini-shops in the country's large cities that are helping to create the fantastic sexual revolution in the United States.

And this mod-fashion craze of see-through dresses and short skirts is so underground happening. The stores cater to a market of teenagers who spend some 15 billion dollars a year on clothing, as well as a post-war market which spends many billion dollars trying to look good and young.

Though the stores flourish in Bohemian neighborhoods they

St. Belvedere looked like nothing on the way. It consisted of little more than a cluster of houses. That is all right on a road junction. Any Know Mark IV tanks that wanted to halt their way down the Anglin-St. Belvedere road and make a push for the beach head had to go through St. Belvedere. $11,000,000 IN TREASURE

TO BE FOUND IN COSTA RICA

He knew what men would do for $11,000,000 dollars, but when he learned what 3 beautiful women would do for just a share of the tropical treasure he was hunting, he joined forces with them.

Editor's Note: An author by an treasure-hunting Mr. Galt has been dug and there is a way to a great fortune! The following true account is excerpted from a book of his of voyages which will appear the other part of the year.

THE LAW CONCERNING TREASURE HUNTING

United States law regarding Treasure: "Can gold silver plate or similar articles hidden for safe keeping and forgotten or remaining undiscovered, by reason of death of the person who hid them, are technically known as Treasure Trove. Treasure Trove is almost any thing is found on the earth, but not being worth it, and no man knows to whom it belongs."

In present day terms the includes paper money!

"A finder of treasure trove is entitled thereby, as against the owner of the land where the treasure was found, and all the world except the true owner in the absence of statute, but the owner of the land is entitled to property other than treasure trove, unburied as he is. The owner of the soil to which treasure trove is found acquires no title thereby, by virtue of his ownership of the land."

To do, for treasure find the landowner's permission—otherwise you are guilty of trespass—as a written agreement that includes:

1. Name of parties searching.
2. Reason for searching.
3. Agreement on Division of treasure.

If land's State owned permission must be obtained from the State. Most states do not demand any percentage of the find.

I remember, for a moment, I was strong, double, then, triple, and as a flash there were six of them striding into my office. Six of the most gorgeous girls I've ever seen this side of the equator. I rubbed my eyes as I stared, seeing my long legs seemed stop my desk in the floor but they were real women, stark, unarmored and yes—no blouse—the breasts I'd ever want and right then and there, I had a premonition that my long delayed hunting trip to Galt's Wyo., to bag an undiscovered bank that I'd been promising myself was in peril. As a ship repairer, insurance broker, marine supplier and junked-arms trader, I'd been tied up in Galt's Island for years. I wanted to get the rest of the rest of my month for a while the smell of salt was at my nostrils. But as that day slowly slipped into my office, I knew a world was some time before I'd be back in the States thinking after that bank.

I bounced to my feet, unconsciously inspired the three-day walk in my toes. I wasn't allowed to become such desirable company. My shirt was getting my whole shirt covered with sweating perspiration and the big toe of my right foot poked out of my sandal. "Thank the opportunity, thank!" I said loudly. "But you took me by surprise. The only thing there came into the warehouse shop the last couple of weeks was a hot crystal. Where'd you come from?"

"Don't matter" and one of them a tall sleek with a boning that made Japan's Marfield look like a little girl. "We were we're going that way?"

"You go off course there, your shirt for Yuma is a report!" I quipped, still moving. "Maybe your movement of a sudden movement, or maybe I'm dream up and your just nervous!"

A beautiful battle up to me, and the man had a battle. "When you're through cleaning matter, I'll explain. We're always. We were in a show touring the upper regions of South America when our producer landed with the dough, standing on. We were wondering how we'd pump up passage down back home when Carol, that's the name with the picture over there, Carol remembered that a local owner had credited to her that there was a lot of pearls stocked at a Green Island."

I mentioned the owner to myself. "On that particular way of local money?" I asked immediately.

"A treasure that could be converted into money," Carol continued.

"The woman never returned," explained in my face. "You mean you want me to take you to that so-called treasure?"

"That's your job, being a guide, isn't it?" said the woman. "Her one-night stand boyfriend told Carol exactly where it is, so all we have to do is lower rope and look over the gate. We can't pay you now," she continued. "But we'll see you in one or two months home."

I counted the up of three, voluptuous, desirable, and in every portfolio. For the time being, there were other ways to make my life. I'd be the slapper on a fishing boat. "Well, I did have other plans," I started to say.

Carol looked up to me, playfully focused on with one of her pearls. Her violet eyes smiled, the next eyes looking "intense." "What can be made you know?" she said, softly. And right then and there I knew that the right-pointed back waiting for me at Cady would have to wait a little longer.

"Okay, partners, you've got yourself a hard hand," I said, waving them in and indicating some railway cars. I watched them making themselves comfortable sitting, standing, my back lying down on There's always a risk in any treasure hunt, but the value of this one makes it worth taking.

In some cases precautions must be taken against underwater horrors, if tragedy is to be avoided.

the entire lot, all the while paying a price with respect of "Dance, dance, dance me." Which would be the first in this round-the-world treasure? "What's the catch?" I asked.

"Partner, you are someone who seemed to be the masterpiece for the society, played a cigarette between her cotton lips, lit it, and a spark of smoke exploded. "I'll give you part of it now and the other half later, you know, but turning up a date for bill to make sure you keep your part of the bargain. The best like we said is no Green Island."

"Hold everything," I broke in. "Right at the last we've got a negative situation. Costa Rica, which has permission over the island, has some ground rules about treasure hunting. You've got to be equipped, get a license, post a bond and be accompanied by a naval vessel with you firing all expenses. Any treasure recovered, Costa Rica gets our half. I can talk some of those of the entrepreneurs. How much dough have you guys got collectively?"

The 12 women there had between them wasn't enough to fund the month's business. But after they were reassured by my promise to attend to all the details, Paula went on. "Green Island, as you must know was a favorite hangout spot for pirates' loot. Well not long ago, a captain named Benson, Green Island turned to piracy, using the name of Benson Moore and a ship called the Demagogue which he replaced with a Spanish ship he named the Falco. He made a number of quick hits—200 tons of silver here 40 tons of gold coins, almost 1000 gold bricks, 300 pearl-encrusted gold vessels. The loot was estimated at $11,000,000. Benson named his huge board as a Green Island crew which he took the precaution of sending with a man-made landslide. It shot him later in British waters if ever caught. Benson took his parties that up."

She doesn't look right disturbed, she says. They say she was that way when she was with some man.

Editor's Note: The author is American living overseas, worked in European markets that contained the tunnels he wrote about in 1960, when the film industry was still making the sexploitation films by the dozens. He was present at several of the meetings where the managers who owned them met and talked of the tunnels. The efforts are in the name and word of several of these people spoken.

I PLASTERED MYSELF against the tunnel wall as soon as I saw the light. It was a weak yellow glow looking up and down for all the gloom of the narrow pass. That tunnel was the same tunnel. Shortly, it approached my looking place, a narrow hole tunnel partially covered by a tarp of skin.

As the light came closer I could hear the noise—against-the-grains of someone who was short of breath.

And then I saw her.

The light came from a lantern on her man's cap. The cap was all the clothes she was wearing. Harshened like a drill man, a trade girl was pulling a loaded man over down the track. While her bare feet felt for the wooden run between the rails she stepped at her partner, an great evanescent of sweat poured down her pale body.

ARE AMERICAN WOMEN TOO SEXY?

A casebook article with shocking proof:

Women in the U.S. are 5 times more romantic than the average male!

By ANGEL WORTHINGTON

WHICH AS THE GOOD BOOK says, the Creator took one of Adam's ribs to create Eve. He started a "riding" job that hasn't stopped yet.

Women have been having one great big secret job ever since—the expense of Man. They're silently allowed him to believe, for all those innumerable thousands of years, that he is the ruler of the roost, the top banana, the lord of the manor—or whatever way you want to say "Master." Where yet women have even let him take the reins is thinking that he is even "boss of the house."

Actually women know—and women are only now beginning to answer facts to support them—that working is further from the truth. That woman, usually, is the better lover.

Does this last year make you? Frankly, it even hurts more and that of my colleagues. Admittedly even though I am supposed to be an objective, dispassionate scientist—a kind of truth teller—I admit, whenever I study last, it does kind of take the wind out of my sexually strong sails.

But should it truly matter who is the better lover if both sides get a real enjoyment out of their loving?

It is true, however, that women can take more loving (and give more too) than men. Ever noticed on the popular project of trying to completely satisfy a woman? Truthfully now, who not?

The United States Society for Psychosexual Research, in a study involving more than 200 women and 100 men, learned that a woman is capable of making love—consciously—five times the average man's one time—and he rarely more quickly to start a new session.

Most of us have heard of nymphomania (Witch's Book: Nymphomania—like its male counterpart, nymphomaniac, is a pathological condition which people are in a constant, abnormal, spinning state of sexual excitement, and have to be physically restrained or death from heart failure can result from their sexual excesses) who can make love to a lot greater number of lovers than the so-called "one stand" male.

There appears to be a little of the "nymph" in most women and this, perhaps, is what makes them better at the love game than men.

In the course of a days work, I have had many beautiful complaints to me "that their wives were cold." Let me tell you something: there is no such thing as a cold woman. There are only "inadequate" men. Let these poor complaining men take the time, and have the patience to share what they think is coldness, and they will learn that they've been living with an "inadequate" that just needed spicing before it could go off.

History does tell us of an Egyptian princess who was terribly abused and humiliated as being told by her husband that she was incapable of giving satisfaction to a man. While the military gentleman was on a campaign to relieve some nearby Ethiopians, his wife took on all comers for a bit. Her plan? One small room—but only if needed.

When the infatigably marauding husband returned from the wars he found that his wife had an unusual taste of her kind, mixing with sharks to prevent him. He had obtained a job of almost rending the Great Pyrenees in size, and she sweetly told her husband just the job that was best for him. Now that is a lot of encouragement a lot of sex. By the way, her frustrated hubby didn't get as much as a push from his wife.

Monsieur, the wife of Emperor Charles of Rome, it goes that she was better at making love than any woman in her country, challenged the most famous prostitute of the time to a public duel at one of the city's market places. Monsieur's score: 24 men in one day. And Monsieur was not a passionate avenger by any means. Back of these duals was worn out to a frazzle—but thoroughly. In fact, unknown to her husband, Missus Leon spent her entire day—every day—in the market place disguised as a common streetwalker and who habitually joined her daily to my soul all who dared to visit her and partake of her considerable charms. Payment was only wanted. Then, in the evening after a day of pouring her passion, Monsieur would return to her palace and had royal wife, ladies, perfume and take care of her boy Charles, Charles, like a great many Roman emperors was no slouch on the couch either—but he was never able to make Monsieur pull away.

Male homosexuality is in fact another manifestation of the sexual superiority of women. In my clinical studies I have been struck by the fact that often homosexuals are men who suffer from intense feelings of masculine inadequacy, the result a great part from their inability to sexually satisfy women.

In fact, here is another case in point towards the woman's sexual superiority. When I described Monsieur and her phenomenal appetites the male reader might have thought: "But we've had Don Juan."

Even though Don Juan may have had a famous record of conquests during his entire life it is so very attached to the potency of his male vigor with these women, but simply to his expertly developed power of seduction. Further records show that Don Juan was primarily interested in the seduction of women only, rather than in their sexual conquest. He was completely content if a hot and passing young dame threw herself upon his bed and returned the Spanish Cavalier with expertly spread arms. Don Juan, a gentleman to the core would most often merely tip his cocked hat, thank the woman graciously—ignoring her profferings of love—rush back down from the lover's balcony and be off for parts unknown to repeat the whole thing, but.

Whether he of his essence realized it or not, Don Juan actually was a homosexual. Today's "Don Juan Complex" is the designation used by those in the psychological professions to clinically describe an overly peacockish male who seeks to place in himself his sexual adequacy as a man (which he unconsciously doubts) by seducing as many women as possible. Really does this type of man ever find a full complete satisfying relationship with a woman? If he were not so egotistically disturbed he would find that not good women would undoubtedly be more than adequate for all his sexual needs.

The other great male lover of Jane Cameron, but his own problems. He could not attain fulfillment without resorting to the unusual. His eccentricity is detailed "Monsieur" in themselves show he was emotionally inclined. Furthermore, these "Monsieur" often display that trait and that of eccentricity in their usual contents. Cameron shows a marked preference towards performing with one woman in the presence of another. Throughout his "Monsieur" it becomes apparent that that Cameron was a true exhibitionist. An incident—which we cannot print here—describing Cameron's romantic prelude with a large-bodied woman, and relating all the details with scrupulous medical details, even more dramatically prove Cameron was not a normal man.

The whole business of Woman being the second superior has its germ in another theory, also appealing to the male. This theory has been the subject of numerous scholarly and non-scholarly articles and books—that Woman has a physical superiority over man to large with in her lower body. "The Natural Superiority of Woman" Dr. Aubrey Montagu brings out facts, only recently proved by statistical studies, which have long been recognized by physicians, physiologists, and anthropologists—who have wisely, if unconsciously, kept their mouths shut—that while men, in larger, more muscular and has a larger brain, a woman has it over him in the following ways:

- Woman lives longer than Man. Actual figures compiled by insurance companies have long demonstrated this.

- Woman gets sick less often, and recovers more quickly.

- Woman is far less often in contact of a mental paralytic or a drug addict—contradicting the impression often made by many men that it is Woman who drives the male to insanity and narcotics.

- Woman has a higher pain threshold—on other words she is hardened less by pain and can withstand it better than does her sexual opposite. Ask any physician.

- Woman feels the cold less than Man. Prognostic research of your own should have revealed this fact to you long ago—women wearing only slinky shoes a thin dress even thinner nylon stockings and a light coat or pulchre stroll with evident comfort down a blustering legal street while her heavily burdened male companion, stuffed up to his eyebrows with a heavy suit or even heavier overcoat, a wool-woven overcoat and sturdy shoe stores and his clattering teeth chatter and click like a Spanish dancer's castanets.

- Woman, in one instance is more than merely superior. She is, according to calculations, over 500,000 years in advance of Man in one respect—her helping forehead. Or, to put it more poetically and scientifically, her closed down. It is repeat, smooth and helping—the way a male should become a full-million years hence.

Another society not open or strong, but just as possible may be in the offing. With the population of the world today ever growing more predominantly female, eminent sociologists claim there may even be a natural trend toward a society where a few men service a great number of females—a sort of reverse and-brotherhood of manhood. A lot more has to be made, if you are one of the few males required. But, think of it man, day after day after day—or, rather, night after night after night. And so time has flying, either. This society would most probably be male archaic, Erosian or sex. Men would not make the most. Woman would be the boss, then would simply "society" them. It would be a kind of brother-society where the women would be the Queens and the men the drosses, serving the same death sentence, perhaps, when their usefulness—their sexual utility—came to an end.

Less fun, but less infamous at the same time—and still brotherhood—would be the kind of society where men would simply supply the sperm—to be taken away from him in the same coldly efficient, unceremonious way it is removed from a priest and built today. The sperm, deep frozen, would be used as needed. In this way the sperm could be utilized so much more efficiently for artificial insemination and go a long way further than it does today. This technique would be a lot less messy (apparently for the male, but it would require the necessary existence of still frozen males).

But what about the women "winning" sexual relations with men? That is where one of the fronts of Woman's sexual superiority comes into evidence.

Women is capable of outliving in sex more often and for longer periods than men. Albert Ellis, Ph.D., a noted authority on sexual matters, says in his excellent and authoritative book, "The American Sexual Tragedy": "There are reasons to believe that many females, when fully released from sexual taboos and when are biologically more sexually adequate than the average male. Sexually released women may have climates that are more frequent, more intense, and more lasting than those had by equally released men. . . . It may well be only the last male who can thus utilize a sexually released, frequently heightened female." In other words, Ellis has learned from his long and extensive clinical experience with many females that the average woman is capable of having a better more frequent, and more intense sex life than the average male. Yet despite many claims to the contrary a woman is just as aptly capable of going without sex for longer periods than a man. Today there are many more virgin women—males, quaterns, married women etc.—living out their lives without apparent discomfort than there are virgin men.

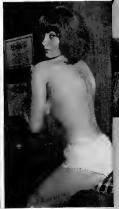

The sexual attitude of Woman is an important part of her sexual superiority over Man. Donald Day in "The Evolution of Love" states that "it seems the more intimate the female is to the more she can let her desires to share heat, or conversely, refuse that to dead cools. When a male's sex hunger becomes strong enough that "the cat" is more important "than the cream." This is not ordinary love for a woman.

For after all "Sex," wrote Greta Muehl Hays "for the male is an episode for women it is the preoccupation of life."

DANIELLE DUPREE

Like our beautiful Danielle Dupree, you can see for yourself, did a very good job of it. She spent most of her early years in the wide open spaces coming up with as healthy a body as possible. She obviously spent her time well, for she passes our inspection with straight A's. Since attaining the ripe age of twenty, she has lived in Denver, where she works as a legal secretry, modeling some on the side. We're seriously glad she's decided to be on our side, as we could use and appreciate her shape as long as she keeps forcing it. She chose Denver over the eastern metropolitan areas because she wants to be somewhere where there is still plenty of open country around for her to romp and play. She's the kind of girl, though, who could make anyplace a playground. Speaking of playgrounds, when she finds one she just loves to swing. Wouldn't you dig swinging with Danielle? Up, up, and away!

CAPTIVATED—NEW GUYANA STYLE ... Because of the GREAT DEMAND FOR SCIENTIFIC MURDER STAFFS, many of the tribes in this area have returned to the AGE-OLD CUSTOM OF KIDNAPING VISITING WITH ATTRACTIVE LOOKING SLAVES and using the method that has been handed down from generations to generations, THEY ARE PURCHASING THE TRIBES AND HOLDING THEM ON THE OPEN MARKET. Attractive specimens being as much as $1000 and a NATIVE COULD LIVE A WHOLE YEAR ON JUST ONE SALE. And the authorities were powerless to stop the business as evidenced by the fact that a SQUAD OF TWENTY MEN DISAPPEARED IN THE JUNGLE JUNGLE ON ONE MISSION TO WEND OUT AND RESCUE THE SLAVES OVERSEAS. Six months later, a widow of one of the men was approached by a man on the street who offered to sell her a human head. She took ONE LOOK AND DEMANDS. The head was that of her husband, but the headhunter got off when he claimed he thought IT WAS A TIGER HEAD.

COMMUNIST-PROFIT RINGS ... almost daily the newspapers report how the police have broken UP ANOTHER COMMUNIST PROFITING where all the PROSTITUTES were HARBORED SLAVES and STOLEN PT-9 MACHINES and were otherwise WELL ACCEPTED IN THEIR COMMUNITIES. But what really bothers the cops and politicians is the fact that most of the time, the COMMUNISTS know all about their FIVE'S EXTRA-CURRICULAR ACTIVITIES and, in many cases, KIDNAP WAS THE ONE WHO BANGED THEM INTO BEHIND THE SCENE. One vice-detective blamed the spiraling COST OF LIVING and the desire to GATHER AS MANY MATERIAL GOODS AS POSSIBLE. "After all," he said, "many of these rings bring in MORE THAN $500,000 EACH YEAR and the money is split among the WORKING GIRLS without the bulk of the payments going to the syndicate---THEY."

ORDER THESE INFO ... the FEDERAL GOVERNMENT prints and publishes thousands of BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS that are a TREASURY TO THE AMERICAN MAN. The following are a good example of this and can be purchased IN by writing to the SUPERINTENDENT OF DOCUMENTS, GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20402 ... "FACULTIES AND FREIGHT" is a POCKET GUIDE for both the male and female WASHINGTONIAN for only THIRTY-FIVE CENTS. Order number is 51,77,100. "FROM THE ROAD" is an IDEAL PLANNING GUIDE for the family which costs only 49¢ and 50¢. "NORTHWEST PART OF THE COUNTRY" is complete 40 PAGES, SIX PICTURED PROTOCOL MAPS and many-sized lists of some 400 TRAVEL EXTRAC TIONS. Order number is 1 23-21 P45 and the price is only 50¢-a-DOLLAR. And too the man who has PROBLEMS with the AIRPLANE FLYING OVER HIS HOME, there's a study and a MANUAL on how to THROUGLAND THE SCOUTS AGAINST THIS ANNOYANCE for only .50. If interested, use 51,24,179 when ordering.

RACKET RINGS ... more and more WORRY is being left to HOUSEHOLD FROM THAT WHEN EMPLOYED IN AMERICA. In ENGLAND alone, it is estimated that a total of 5000-6000-a-HALF-MILLION DOLLARS is stolen by criminals EVERY YEAR and although BOSS AND GANG get most of the cash, occasionally a WEIRD REPORT is made. One day last several thousand dollars of the FISHING BOAT had neighborhood WOULD BE THE DAILY WHILE another left $5,000 so her EIGHTH WOULD always be well stuffed with seeds and lettuce.

CONSUMER WARNING Experts advise all credit buyers to avoid the companies which offer to "CONSOLIDATE YOUR DEBTS," and "SECURE YOUR MONTHLY PAYMENTS" for a FEE because chances are, you'll end up in BIGGER FINANCIAL TROUBLE and avoid a good chance of LOSING YOUR CREDIT RATING. So far, 34 STATES have PASSED LAWS PROHIBITING "DEBT ROLLING" FOR PROFIT and 19 OTHERS have LAWS REGulating the PROCESS. But there are still 12 STATES which permit the "DEBT ALIENATOR FOR PROFIT" and this scheme has'nt been banned among the TOP TEN CONSUMER FRANCHISES. The way it works is this way: you have your OWNED BUSINESS, creditline, and can't make all the monthly payments. So a COMPANY OFFERS TO TAKE A SET AMOUNT EACH WEEK and SPREAD THIS AMOUNT around to all your creditors, TAKING THEIR FEE, which can range 10% to TWENTY-FIVE PERCENT of the "BUNDLED AMOUNT". However, all they do is send your CREDITORS less than the actual amount or tell you they REFINANCING THE BILL which adds even INTEREST to the money you already owe. And in some cases, they have taken SEVERAL MONTHLY PAYMENTS and then left town without PAYING ANYONE. So if you need help with an overburdened bill paying schedule, contact your local PUBLIC DEFENSE AGENCY, DISTRICT ATTORNEY or LEGAL AID SOCIETY. These entities are set up to handle such CREDIT PROBLEMS and they'll do it for NOTHING.

FLYING SAUCER

Ohio boy scorched by UFO—Recent mass sighting in California—Horse “eaten” by saucer?

Flying saucers (or UFOs if you prefer that designation) are here—they have been around for at least 50 years, and there is no indication at present that they will go away, at least not very soon.

"Flying saucer" is the rather whimsical name given to the 20th century's "freaks" in the skies by reporters in 1937 when pilot Kenneth Arnold spotted nine discs over Mount Rainier, Washington, and compared them to saucers skipping over water. He was adding to their exotic status as they flew among the mountain peaks that day. UFO, on the other hand, is an acronymic slip of the tongue for Flying Object, and was used by the United States Air Force for Technical Intelligence Command when they set up the investigation of the strange objects that night.

It is doubtful that even the most avid reader of newspapers and magazines is totally unfamiliar with the terms. Flying Saucer and UFO. Some may think they are nothing but hallucinations and will not even think that they are some kind of explanatory probe, but all are aware that they are the subject of a great deal of controversy.

We are extremely familiar with the subject of UFOs, having been deeply involved with the mystery since its beginning as much as in fact that we founded the Aerial Phenomena Research Organization (APRO) in

by Jim and Coral Loontjens

World-famous UFO researchers and investigators, Mr. and Mrs. Loontjens have written UFOs OVER THE AMERICAS and FLYING SAUCER OCCUPANTS, as well as numerous articles on the subject.

1952, hoping that we could find some answers to the questions people were asking. We have learned quite a lot, but we are still far from having all the answers. Today the two most burning aspects of UFOs are what they are exactly and what caused them or where they come from.

Consciousness continuously surrounds this subject, and as a result quite a number of misconceptions have arisen. It is often assumed by those who have not given the subject any serious study that UFOs are seen only by drinks, the mentally debased or the emotionally disturbed. It is also widely believed or "accepted" that the sightings have not been registered on radar, and that there have been no reports involving a number of people. Both these beliefs are false.

Dr. W. Lee Sprinkle, one of AFNO's advisory staff along with a companion, has seen a UFO. Sprinkle is a consulting psychologist for the U.S. military at Dayton, e.g., in Lane, Ohio—hardly what you would call an unreliable source.

UFOs have been picked up on radar many times. A case in support for contention is the sighting of the UFO over Wash. region, D.C., in July 1952. The fact of contention is Wash. region Joplin. Mr. Harry Hansen told in an interview with the press that they were not really seen visually from the ground and by pilots in the air, but were tracked on radar. Despite Air Force personnel's statements, he discounted the possibility that they were some kind of atmospheric phenomenon.

Now sightings are much more numerous than is generally assumed. The number of people who saw the saucers over the Colorado in 1950 could fill that report as a mass sighting. There are records of many other sightings in which hundreds and thousands of people were involved. The two photos which accompany this article, perhaps the most famous UFO photographs in existence, were taken during a mass sighting.

On January 26, 1951, at 12:15 p.m., Jimmy Santora, a civilian photographer working with the Mexican Navy for an International Geophysical Year study project, was alerted that a UFO was proceeding toward the island of Yucateca. Santora managed, despite the parking and shooting, to get three photos. The claim that something unusual was present came from both the tow and the island of the ship, and altogether over one hundred of the ships crew, including all cars and seamen, viewed the object.

Another misconception about UFOs is that no astronomer has seen one. This is not true. Walter Adams, director of Lick Observatory in Spain, advised an unidentified rectangular object which appeared on its radar and moved at high speed on May 22, 1950. Dr. Clyde Tombaugh, the only living astronomer to have discovered a planet (Pluto) the sixth from the sun, observed a UFO (or UFOs) in Los Caños, New Mexico, in August, 1949. Although he has never said that what he saw was a space ship, he could not identify the strange lights as anything from this earth. They looked a V. Lorensen of rectangular lights which kept 1 and intervals between one another.

The large concentrations of sightings have little to do with extraterrestrial factors such as the altitude of the planet. We have found that the number of sightings being reported has no direct relationship to the amount of publicity given the objects. Quite often a certain report will capture the attention of the news media and the general public will get the idea that UFOs have suddenly appeared again—when in fact they are just not seen as frequently as they were.

A case in point is the 1950 sighting of an egg-shaped object and two tiny occupants. Mr. Everett New Mexico, by policeman Lonnie Zerkow. Right after the Roswell incident made news, others probably encouraged by the serious attitude of the press, reported their own sightings. But the UFO activity of that particular period (April and May, 1950) was confined to the most part to a relatively small area. It was not until the last of July, 1950, that an extended period of UFO activity (involving hundreds of sightings) appeared in a few hours in her and unstrapped, while the other women stood around whispering.

I watched them, agitated by that animal violence. If that violence were unleashed against this, I knew, I would suffer the same fate as the unfortunate peasant—beaten to death or blown to pieces.

Suddenly I had to verify all of them, play them off against each other, keep them happy.

"You must have heard. One of the girls carried into a cage, together from a dozen wounds, making painful moaning sounds. The water stopped with a convulsion, the rhythm of labor stopping with the sweat that ran down her sturdy arms and soaked like freckles. 'He is more strong,' she warned the others.

I sat up quickly. "I belong to none of you, women!" I said. "I am a man, not a sack of rice, heads to be thrown back and forth at will. You . . . I pointed at the girl." . . . step back and behave yourself."

The girl gave no sign of having understood. An expression of fear and contempt had transformed her face, present face and the step girl, turned me, quivering with desire and moaning strongly.

"Beats what?" I said in an exasperated tone.

Four of the women closed in on the girl, among her arms. They dragged her, struggling, to a far corner and sat on her.

They were all waiting for my next words. I had nowhere managed to establish my authority over them.

"Very good," I said. "How muchmore, there is only one of us, so you will have to take turns. One of you tonight, and another tomorrow night, like a lottery."

They listened with their mouths hanging open while I talked on so peremptorily, as I could. Finally one of them brought over a basket and they dutifully drew straws. The longest straw was drawn by a short, lively girl named Luan. She had black hair down to her waist and white teeth that flashed at a brilliant smile when she realized she had won the lottery for the night.

I took her bare arm in a firm grip, and left her trembling with indignation. "You are not, daughter!" I said, leading her out of the chamber, far above one of the passageways. I wanted to get as far away from the potentially explosive situation of a dozen high-strung, aroused women, who might be triggered by Luan's state of passion.

It was a long walk down the tunnel, but the way was illuminated all by Luan's woman's cap. It was all the way wrong.

I then remembered the fifteen days and nights. Jorg and Celine checked each morning to see if I was still alive. They seemed to think it was all a great joke.

I was finding it less amusing. The women were fiercely demanding. Each one was determined to make the most of her night. I was begged from back of sleep, perpetually awakened from my slumber. They teased me and teased over me, showing their breasts and cooing sweet gestures with me so that I would have enough to eat. But I felt that I was on top of a bag of dynamite.

It exploded on the twentieth morning. The half-blind woman I had seen the day I was captured had been getting more and more interested in the like names man, Chong. She was hard on me and an expert shot with the rifle she always carried. Kwan had dared her to keep order down below in the shafts, where he didn't dare to send his gun. Even the peasant boy, Lu Pan, was afraid of her. Chong was now happy too.

She had been in the US 2000 as long as the captured peasant girl, and though she managed to get above ground once a week to drink sweet molasses and suck on whole-egg rice of the male guards would have her, she needed something more. And that something there was me.

That morning, she stopped me as I was bringing out of the girl miners back to the dormitory chamber.

"Come with me, peasant," she ordered.

The girl protested, "He is not Chong. Leave him alone."

For spite, Chong struck the girl a blow with the rifle butt that sent her sprawling.

I grabbed the woman's hand and jerked her back. The rifle went off with a sharp crack and a spray of rock went flying. I wrapped the girl from her grasp and continued her against the wall.

"What is going on down there?" called a voice from above. It was Jorg, on his morning inspection. When he saw what was happening, he moved his rifle. But I was faster. I stopped a shot at him, and his body went tumbling down the mine shaft to land closer to my feet.

The girl miners came running out of the mouth of tunnels, bearing excitedly. When they saw Jorg's body and saw that I was holding Chong at bay, they were wild.

I was unable to prevent them from going the half-blind woman a sweet looking. When they had left her behind and unconscious at the head they were still out for blood.

"Follow me!" I shouted. Luan pulled up Jorg's rifle. I let out. Kwan, that one crowbar and their path clear.

As many of us as could fit crowded into the safety mine elevator. We waited at the top while a man drove for two more loads. Then I led the small army of both old mining girls to the building that housed the men officers. They were hunkering their tools and screaming like banshees.

Celine appeared at a window with a gun. Before I could take aim, Luan fired, her rifle and got her with the first shot.

We roared across the clearing and entered the office. The few men we found there were in a ditch for the frozen weapons. They were slumped with wounds, moaned and scratched . . . even, before Kwan had every stick of clothing torn from his body, and while I watched, one of the half-blind girls straddled him and bent him black and blue.

They wanted to kill him, but I persuaded them not to. Instead they tied him hand and foot and loaded him on the back of my jeep. It took me a week to get him to the infirmary at Lu Pan over the jungle tracks. I had my reasons and the end hour of the girls came along to testify to the truth of my report.

An armed government wanted no time in cleaning up the mess. Operations under the new Kwan had not yet been started, but new mine managers were appointed by the government. They even listed back some of the American engineers they had fired the year before. Today, with the political situation continuing to be unstable, most of the ten mines are looking at difficulty to run at a profit. Often, the operation of the mines is reduced to pure chaos. But at least the miners are kept, not enslaved peasant girls working like animals in the darkness of tunnels below the surface of the ground. ■

but his pants down, and after the trial, Blanche was hanged and his crown appraised. Death eventually claimed all the men except one man. He knew the location of the treasure's buried vault, and that information has come down through the years to us, men." Peabody grinned out her cigarette and puffed.

"You'll get the exact location when you land us on Green Island," Creed said, reaching up the porch.

That afternoon, I took my charter boat out of mouthville, back of the valley with girls roared and gear aboard. All the time I kept thoughts about other girls regarding them I'd gained on the Caribbean. This too could turn out to be a wild goose chase, but then, on the other hand, recalling the work I was doing with, I'd enjoy my work being the center, in doing other rewards.

I let the girls bed down for the night in my office, assuming them that we showed off in surprise. It slept almost the day. I checked my newspaper charts double-checked in me everything was straightened then went before to turn on. It'd no longer but the work that the study decrease began to take on the face of one of the girls. She was so real, I could almost touch her. I set up, reacted out, and instead of getting the work, my hand felt the soft warmth of Creed's body. I'd almost the length of her blonde figure. I heard her gasp and the man again was pushing me back, her face something rather her breasts sticking hard against my chest. At the last moment, as the curved ones like a wave, were, I thought if this was a dream, I hoped I'd never awake.

I never returned from heaven with Creed that night and followed in quick succession with the others as that time. We weighed another on down toward the horizon, and since late after dinner there, with the girls watching and dining in the dark. I let Peabody lead the helm while I went to my quarters to adjust my waterclops and aqua-lungs. I never got around to finishing the job because Peabody came around to help me. Whether it was accidental or deliberate, I never knew, but her bikini top suddenly became raised. My hair's entrance back on Green Island had left me with a longer cut easily appeared. And Peabody had the staff for a no-course meal.

Mark my date later, I returned the sheet from Peabody. She gave me a laugh, knowing back as of the know of my intimacy with her. Creed. Did she agree then? All she had to do was ask because my policy was always one to satisfy my customers. Of all the girls, she was the most striking, with her superbly proportioned live foot on her toes topped by an exquisite lace crumpled with sides of pepper-colored hair, that curved down to a scorching hair and long together slight. Still there was something about about her that wanted me out to make the first move.

By the time we reached Costa Rica, where I was to make all arrangements and pick up a small amount, a plan had developed in my mind. I'd given the enough out on a tank, knowing the order. My past a hand and play for an amount when I had made a move to make? It was easier than I thought. Maria and Barbara promptly agreed to cooperate, and I sent them on their mission each fortified with a bottle of gas under her arm. By the time I returned to the small office for my clearance papers, the ship's had been sent and had rescheduled.

Without any loss of time, we pulled up anchor, moving south to reach the Panama Canal. A plan was worked up to make good time, and the girls' silence indicated their unwillingness as we pulled closer to the famed Panama Canal. I pulled "Land Ho!" as the town island loomed on the horizon. Creed liked a more 15 miles wide carved with deep canyons among the rocks and mountains surrounded with palm trees and heavy jungle growth. It was dark and damp from months of tropical rain, and a study of the terrain indicated they would have a deal of a time finding the exact area. Creed knew because landmarks and volcanic eruptions frequently changed the topography. The toughest part of the job was to be on time and the only thing the girls could contribute besides participating the air was to entertain me at the end of each day. As delighted as the prospect seemed to be, I hoped they wouldn't make any demands because I needed all the strength for the work out ahead.

BUT ON THAT MOON, I didn't have to worry much. Even after supper, Peabody had been on her back with a case of phosgene poisoning which I could not understand because we'd all eaten the same food. The next morning, Maria dragged her feet in a suit of rage while working Madras Costa Rica officials were and were people to the shore. Some came to live in its fast growing urban, others came in search of the fabulous treasures buried in its coastal waters.

harvest's name, when the locusts were to be shared? Elsewhere? No, the subject may have been trying to put them permanently out of action. In my lifetime, I'd found only one kind of unfriendly dragon, and a few on land, too, but now for the first time I felt the sharp tip of a dragon's nose as it poked down my nose.

"Let's knock off and rest," I said, when we returned to the boat. "We're over-exercised, and not being very careful. We'll make a fresh start at the creek at dawn." But, I know, I said that only to make myself

I turned this back man, feeling each girl in her back, while that need broke free root. If it were not for the fact that I was the only one able to navigate them back to the mainland I'd probably been disposed of, too. When I stopped back on Jett's Puddle was waiting for me like there had been around my neck as a constant strangulation and I knew in his go-slow car every had, "It can be good and bad, Pete," she whispered heartily. "We can do this the gold between us! We don't need the other!"

So it was Festival Three the religious warlocks hadn't been convinced but here, deliberately played by her! How would it end—these deaths? A ending, with many thoughts rubbed my mind “Where’s Carol?” I asked.

She backed away, holding a similar expression. "She said it was too warm. I suggested she take a shower. She decided to do a little driving around."

My eyes widened with terror.
"Good grief! There are shells and hermit crabs in these water!" And then we are all thoughtful. "What did we see—anything bright?"
"Yes, but black, black."

I towed down to my quarters slipped into a pair of trousers and a bright yellow T-shirt bearing snits and skulls as my brightest life or bright colors. I strapped on my super-long bananas as my face first stopped across the deck, and tumbled headfirst into the drink.

I spotted her pants, watching flip over showing the bottom, then went to glance at the air pump of her tank. My suspicions were confirmed. Freedom had given her an almost empty air tank, and as that slight Carol didn't surface nearly without audible squeals, I picked a flume apart, realizing that she should surface.

with me. As we rose through the blue, crystal waters, I removed my mouthpiece to feed her air. Every time, was going right to her intended to eliminate the use of the mouthpiece, until I spotted what I'd been fearing. All channels closed the cutting-out behind some coral.

Then, again, don't waste more of a 30-day Makah shark and seal season by over-hunting. The yellow T-shirt would have been just the way, but Carol's pink, ruffled baby was a delightful look, and the shade a pace, almost matching us, her gilt skin opening and closing, her hands open glowing as her squalor Carol's eyes bulged with terror. The shark moved several times, closing its mouth, flicking her tail, snapping us, as a predator in the shark-driven smoking space, bleeding and bone-shattering when that was clearly to catch. The water was warm, but Carol shivered as it cold as ice water.

Altogether, a strange yet heated board that drew through the water BARROOM BARROOM - BARROOM! Somebody had started the noise, suddenly stopped it, then turned it on again to cross the dark's attention, to lullness it off. As the clock informed me up towards the thinking stage I noticed my mouthpiece between Clark's lips and lunged fiercely towards the surface. Fear here was wrong, cowardly for as they dropped the waterpiece she had used to spot our danger before and helped Clark up over the rail. As I climbed aboard, I had my last glimpse of that wondrously dimly lit, slung about the water as the illustrated sea-borne machinery for me.

Fear not, warbler: you've earned Card's accolades on the deck. Breathing fresh, I stared down at the beautiful almost male bird, his long beak crossing her becomer beak, the small crown of his stomach, the firm thighs and the full aspect of one whose beak with death, he was hard. What a tragic loss it would've been. He didn't mind have pined himself on a tree, I thought.

Probus was certain She began to utter an apology, reached the battery at it, and said, "I take care of each of those girls and their dogs, I promise you, Pat. If I know not help, I'd gladly con-my own throat?"

Carol sat up. "You did, Freddie. And when we got back, to the mainland tomorrow," she said. "The thing to prove things against you for attempted murder?"

But a station warden told me that there'd be no tomorrow on Gorda Island, or anywhere. The flat water of my didn't clear out, and fast. A volcanic eruption was heading to Wards from deep within the earth. And whatever in the water would be waiting for us in a death by molten lava and spewing rocks.

"Pleased. Now up the ropes?" I looked, while I weigh matter?

SOMEHOW the woman island landed, followed by a three-deck. I whipped over to the steel and maintained the effort out of danger. A powerful, darting explosion tipped the air, even made the ship tremble at that distance. As we looked back, a plume of flame shot upward, followed by a shower of stones and debris. It almost resembled like the end of the world—our immediate world, because we all knew that Boston because wouldn't be open on the trip, there. It was like water here, but the girls had enough of trouble hunting. As the moment all of them were eager to get back to the conference they knew, the background of show for black box lingerie. Saturday night. Finally and still.

Instead of plotting back through the Canal to Great Island, I dropped them off at Mingus, in Nicaragua, where I made arrangements with the captain of an old tramp steamer that was headed to Guatemala, Texas, to take them aboard. As we separated, the girls promised to come back and pick me up on Great Island.

Big that was two years ago, and the war by now that they'd given twice that broken idea. But I still remember Carol's dominion in the kitchen of the treasure—a girl in my basement and money. I came by leaving it only once. Maybe now you'll get over that memory, but that year I'm going with that right power. And in the meantime if you want to take a crack at making Boston's 11,000,000, it's still there waiting for you, along with the telephone and naval secret of Costa Rica, the deep-throated evidence and the sounds of historical stories and battles. ■■ were partially done and were death on both tanks and airplanes, German as well as American.

Two squads of Hitler Company arrived at St. Belvedere just before dark. We were armed with rifles and grenades and nothing else. The local French population gave us a big welcome and wanted us to know when we were coming back. We told them we were not. We were staying right there. We were going to dig in and set up a roadblock. We were going to stop any German tanks that tried to come down the road.

An old Frenchman took one look at us and our weapons and muttered "C'est pas eux," he said to his neighbor. French. "It's not enough. I ran from them. Against the Germans just come there with three big tanks. They are going early to come down the road after dark. They will send you up the mountain. Have you no anti-tank guns?"

Then the Frenchman had put his finger on our big headache. We looked at each other and nodded. We knew that we desperately needed anti-tank weapons. Our third squad, which had the machine and the machine guns, had not separated from the company and was still somewhere on the German peninsula. Whatever there were sitting back against a tank attack.

We could only hope for the best. Our one chance of holding the Germans was that they would hold off their attack that night and that in the end would be lost. If then we might be able to get some anti-tank weapons up and make a fight of it.

"Let me send a messenger back now, lieutenant," I said. "Maybe he can get some action back or equipment."

"All right," Le Harve said. "What we desperately need is time. I'll try anything. Anything."

The Frenchman listened to every word of our exchange. One of them who spoke English answered for the rest. So they knew we needed time before the German tanks started to get into tank weapons.

There were four provisioning French men who had been standing at the edge of the crowd of townspeople. Now one of them stepped forward and got everybody's attention, including ours. He was a big, bearded soldier in a tunic that had none of his usual shape. His body alone, it stood in the right place, almost like the way to a dead fish. He said, no matter what uniforms he wore, would be able to take his eyes away from her no more than a second.

"We are from the west zone," she said in a clear voice, including her three girl friends with a wave of her hand. "From Argon. We will go back there. We will hold the Germans there for you for as long as you want."

The crowd of Frenchmen in the town square started to cheer at the girls. One of them whispered to Harve and me. "They are good," he said. "Look at the night. Protestants. What can they do to hold the Germans back, to keep them from attacking with their tanks?"

The bearded girl whose name we later learned was Marie Delmont drew forward up happily.

"We have a secret weapon," she said freely. "That will hold up the German tanks even long enough for the Americans to get their anti-tank weapons here." The three girls with her nodded their agreement. The majority of everybody had been aroused by this announcement. What was it that the girls thought they could do?

These actors, a leading actress, and Eugene O'Neill are probably the best known to the nation in the field. Eugene O'Neill is especially well known for his numerous dramatic representations of the early years of the century, a field in which the U.S. has the best reputation in the world. And it is in the field of the novel that the U.S. has the best reputation in the world.

Other studies have found a significant association between the use of the Internet and the use of the Internet for health information. The use of the Internet for health information was found to be significantly associated with the use of the Internet for health information.

These findings need replication and validation before we can suggest fully automated detection of water-related RSTs.

Several thousands of people in the 1970s and 80s had the bad luck to get on the wrong side of the very ill-fated scheme, which is now regarded as the worst disaster in a series of such in the building industry.

Pharmaceutical companies are not alone in having failed to anticipate a change in the way that consumers are using their products. For example, the pharmaceutical industry has been slow to recognize the growing importance of the Internet in the way that consumers are using their products. The industry has been slow to recognize the growing importance of the Internet in the way that consumers are using their products.

Cheney is now a self-styled "National Korean American Advisor." He joined a Chicago Congressman's staff as a "strategic issue agent" before working a high-level position in the White House, where he helped the Clinton administration's efforts to end the Korean War. Cheney's Korean American background is a source of pride for him.

Finally, the new findings are related to the fact that the authors have not been able to find any studies that have examined the effect of the new law on the use of the law by the courts.

Students receive step-by-step guidance and instruction for completing their assignment using thinking strategies for each problem. Students take notes during the on-line lesson, and the teacher monitors their progress. The teacher can also monitor the progress of the class as a whole.

Several other articles discussed during the 2008 session focused on the gender gap in the labor market, particularly in the context of the financial crisis. The article by Alfaro et al. (2008) examined the impact of the crisis on the labor market in Latin America, focusing on the gender gap. The authors found that the crisis had a negative impact on the labor market, particularly for women, who were more likely to be laid off than men. This was due to a combination of factors, including the fact that women were more likely to work in the public sector, which was more vulnerable to cuts, and the fact that women were more likely to be in part-time or temporary positions, which were more likely to be eliminated.

The South is Southern. But it needs to grow up. I don't believe in Southern gentility, honey and the Old South's code of conduct of truth, honor, and fairness. I was not alone when I said that and regret

These laboratory-based studies suggest that both the end-capping and the large molecular size may play an important role in determining the adsorption of the polymer on the clay. These results are also in agreement with previous work on the adsorption of polymers on clay.

These results indicate a strong negative relationship between the extent to which the effectiveness of the political and judicial system is not easily changing or changing very slowly and the level of corruption. A change in the legal system and the political system may lead to a decrease in corruption. The political system may be used to implement legal and judicial reforms.

I told her "Big Charlie told me you do it with anybody who wants it."

"Yes," she said, "when my husband is here to watch. This is an honor for my husband and good for me. But I cannot do it unless he is here."

When she told me that, I could not stand it any longer. I would wait. I did not go to the door and knocked her on her back. And then I slipped off the rest of her dress and showed her back on the window pane in the night. She tried to wipe herself, but when I found that a while, her body relaxed. I just what I wanted.

Uncle rushed through the door, covered her eyes the two days he had taken with him when he had gone to watch his nephew. He was about to go. He could not understand why the other days did not come out to meet him, making them cruel and excitement. And then when he came up to the glass itself, he saw that he had not gone. What had happened? he wondered. Was Uncle's game all over? or was he?

Uncle got down, on all fours and crawled through the window, and then he stood up and stared in amazement. Uncle's wife lay naked in a pool of blood on the window pane in the night. What was the matter with her? She had let the evil lamp go out and she must be dead. Even the blood on her was beginning to turn to brown.

Uncle in the end lamp. He used a big machine-gun and the lamp quivered and threw off much light and heat. Then Uncle was down and moved for his wife to come to her senses.

As the glass warmed up, Uncle gradually returned to consciousness. He came to finally and told her husband from she had been raped by the red-haired white man. Uncle took it as a personal insult to himself that he had not been asked by the white man for permission to make love to his wife. A dull ball of fury and hatred and grew in his mind.

I must go now, Uncle," he said his wife. "and find the red-haired white man and kill him for dishonoring me."

Uncle's wife was gone stolen by the white red-haired man, and he had to make a new deal. But he had no doubt and the man he would have to conquer. The white man in white skin, the eyes appeared on a white skin into the shape of a glass, passing in the night. Then he slipped it outside into the house and when it was suddenly hard as a board of wood. Then he moved his hands and feet, and landed up on his feet.

Uncle took a small desk into the room of Uncle. The two days he had taken with him when he had gone to watch his nephew, he had taken with him when he had gone to watch his nephew. He had taken with him when he had gone to watch his nephew.

MAJOR WAS LEAVING against the story when the white man, the white man he had taken with him when he had gone to watch his nephew. He had taken with him when he had gone to watch his nephew.

Uncle was across the space that separated him from the white man. He landed on his back, driving Major into the room. The two men lay on the floor in a shower of red hot steel. Major remained on the floor, turned through his clothing and was his back. The white man lay on his back. He was beyond pain, he had a mark of white skin.

Uncle was like a pole driven into the white man's back. The white man was like a pole driven into the white man's back. The white man was like a pole driven into the white man's back.

And then, as suddenly as he had landed his attack, the white man was gone. The white man was gone. The white man was gone.

Big Charlie Connor, owner of the white man's house, was like a pole driven into the white man's back. The white man was like a pole driven into the white man's back. The white man was like a pole driven into the white man's back.

The white man was like a pole driven into the white man's back. The white man was like a pole driven into the white man's back. The white man was like a pole driven into the white man's back.

FLYING SAUCER FACTS

1944) took place on a worldwide scale.

Many readers will recall the press-coverage with UFOs and alien bodies in the fall of 1967. The news coverage began about a month after a Colorado rancher found the full-dissection body of "Gregory" in September. The flesh had been mysteriously stripped from the torso's head and shoulders, and the vital organs and fluids were gone. Strange markings on the ground suggested that whatever had killed Gregory had come from above and left the same way. (Ten more puzzling cases, the first that UFO-able to tell over the world had begun to an extent in July and had resulted a peak in September. These reports begin to describe "to it is appeared that the public about Gregory's death was the result of increasing popular interest in the highly controversial phenomena.

Sightings have continued to be reported since January, but the monthly total is insignificant compared to the hundreds per month the preceding summer. Some interesting cases have come to our attention however. After thorough investigation and evaluation we have found them to be just as puzzling as any of those published in the summer of 1967. A case in point involves a dismembered alien with seven pointed points on the leading edge which was viewed by residents in Redlands, California, on the evening of February 4, 1968. The actual sighting was preceded by a strange noise which resembled as it was similar to the sound of the "saw" on a Thermador TV program

Most of those who heard the sound and saw the object exits the day before Redlands thought the two were connected. However after interviewing the witnesses and examining the scene, AFPO's investigation (Dr. Philip Galt) a professor of Geology at the University of Redlands found that the sound actually came from a new "saw" and reactor unit which was on a test run. The unknown object itself apparently made no noise. The incident occurred to publicly except in the local press.

A particularly intriguing ongoing report arrived at our office in late March which involves a young boy who was apparently burned by an unidentified flying object.

Gregory Wells is the 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Wells who live near Gardnerville, Ohio. Mr. Wells is a retired U.S. Force sergeant on the 26th of March, 1968 at 11 PM Gregory went into his family's trailer to his grandmother's home for a cup of water. The paper had this case during the winter and the family found their drinking water from the the a faucet.

Gregory got the water and headed back to the trailer. A few minutes later which seemed to come from behind him, appeared an object that he named and passed in front of a light bulb-shaped object hovering about a foot about 300 feet away. It he watched it later emerged from the bottom of the object and began to rotate. When it took pointed toward Gregory it beam of red light erupted from it. He turned and ran, this left a burning sensation on his back at his arm. He began to scream and started to strip off his jacket. He it was in flames. His mother and grandmother hearing his screams, rushed outside. Immediately the grandmother grabbed the boy and poured the water on the boy's body. Fortunately Gregory was wearing a heavy sweater under his jacket, so except for two places where Mr. Wells' mother said that he was not burned. His mother and grandmother both observed the object for the next ten minutes, after which it appeared to "fly" from a sun.

It is difficult to explain why has studied the phenomena that UFOs are not seen only by children and college students. As we are faced with only one possible conclusion: The objects are manifestations of a psychological disease of modern's perceptions—or they are real physical material.

AFPO's former Director, Rognstad, states the late Dr. Oliver Foxworth in 1966 "If the UFO phenomenon is supported (necessary) it could be why in fact, it is of a very special kind because we know that most observers are not psychotic subjects (that) the hallucination that they could explain only the in the capital case. It is study sightings witnessed by groups of persons from the problem based on a different aspect. Psychologists have proven that it is impossible to produce the same hallucination in different persons, subjected to the same stressful situation. Also, it is later into consideration, the cases in which the same UFO is sighted by different groups of observers placed at different locations and with no connection with each other than the psychological explanation defined above. Because we would have to admit not only the reality of the group hallucination but also the reality of the psychic transference of the hallucination from one group of people to another. This would be more fantastic and unusual than the admission of the UFO's physical reality."

Dr. Foxworth was one of South America's leading anthropologists, and well-qualified to speak on matters involving mind and psychology.

"So what next?" Strange objects which have been seen by groups of people—well-dressed, people—not only in the United States but throughout the world. Some of these objects have been tracked in motion and others have been photographed in nature settings. We it accept at the reader with some of the more interesting and detailed incidents from the past as well as agreed reports.
